

How Republicans Can Still Block Obama's Judges: Blue Slips

“Senate Democrats snatched the GOP's most potent weapon for blocking President Barack Obama's judges last week when they executed the "nuclear option" and eliminated the 60-vote threshold to advance non-Supreme Court nominees.

But there's another, more obscure tactic Republicans can use to block Obama's attempts to fill the dozens of remaining judicial vacancies. It's called the "blue slip" policy.

The blue slip is an old tradition, dating back to at least 1917, that lets senators have a say on which judges are appointed to courts in their home state. The way it works is that when a judge is nominated, the Judiciary Committee sends a "blue slip" to home state senators seeking their approval. If they sign off, the committee moves forward with the nomination. If one or both of them disapproves or withholds the blue slip, the nomination tends to grind to a halt...” more... Talkingpointsmemo.com November 27, 2013

Hi, I'm Dax Lopez.
I was on the board of the activist, anti-enforcement,
pro-amnesty GALEO corporation for 11 years.

GALEO actively opposes:

- Immigration enforcement
- Voter ID
- ICE holds
- English as our official language
- We joined the ACLU in suing to overturn state law designed to drive illegals from Georgia -
- And we smear police officers!
